CAR LOAD PERCH FOR PORTAGE LAKE

LARGE YELLOW VARIETY FROM LAKE HURON.

Other Lakes in Vicinity to be Liberally Planted.

A car load of yellow lake perch fry was planted in Lake Margrethe Tuesday, in addition to fifty cans that had already been planted there this season.

These perch are taken from a small stream near Cheboygan that the fish had run into out of Lake Huron. It is said that literally millions of yellow lake perch fry are crowding themselves into the stream and are scooped up by the shovelful. The State fish commission are taking advantage of this natural source of supply and, instead of hatching them in the fish hatcheries, are taking the fry as they come up into the creeks. The same condition exists in the Boardman river, from which the State game department has taken and shipped millions of yellow perch fry to the inland lakes. This condition has never been known to occur before and will save the state of Michigan thousands of dollars in hatching expense.

The fish when they arrived in Grayling were found to be from 3 to 4 inches in length, and it is reasonable to believe that almost every one of them will live to grow into big fish. Supt. P. G. Zalsman, of the local hatchery, was on hand to superintend the planting of them. Assistance was summoned to cart the cans of fry to the lake and in a short time there were a number of trucks on hand to give their service free. These who helped in the hauling were Harry Simpson, H. Peterson, Conrad Sorenson, Sigwald Hanson, George Schable and the Fish Hatchery truck.

The lake was pretty rough and it was necessary to plant the fry along a shore where the waves could not wash the little fish onto the beach. At first the fry remained in schools about the boat and there were miriads of them. Finally some of them started for the deep water and soon the whole school followed. It was a great sight to see this cloud like mass floating out to deep water. These fish are of a large variety and will make a valuable accessory to Lake Margrethe. Supt. Zalsman says that these fish should be ready to spawn in a couple of years and should be sufficient to keep this lake well supplied for years to come.

Other lakes as well as Lake Margrethe are also receiving several cans of these fish. Fifteen cans have been shipped each to Wolf, and Crapo lakes near Lewiston, and to Shoopack and Twin lakes, and 10 cans to Grass lake near Lovells. Next week there will be fifteen cans each for K. P. lake and School Section lake. Wm. Kroge of Lovells is looking after the planting in the lakes of that region.

HOUSE BACKS LLOYD GEORGE

British Premier Given Overwhelming Vote of Confidence.

London.—Lloyd George has swept away all British opposition to his policies in dealing with the Irish situation, has silenced his political critics, and is now free to conduct the negotiations with Sinn Fein in his own time and by his own method.

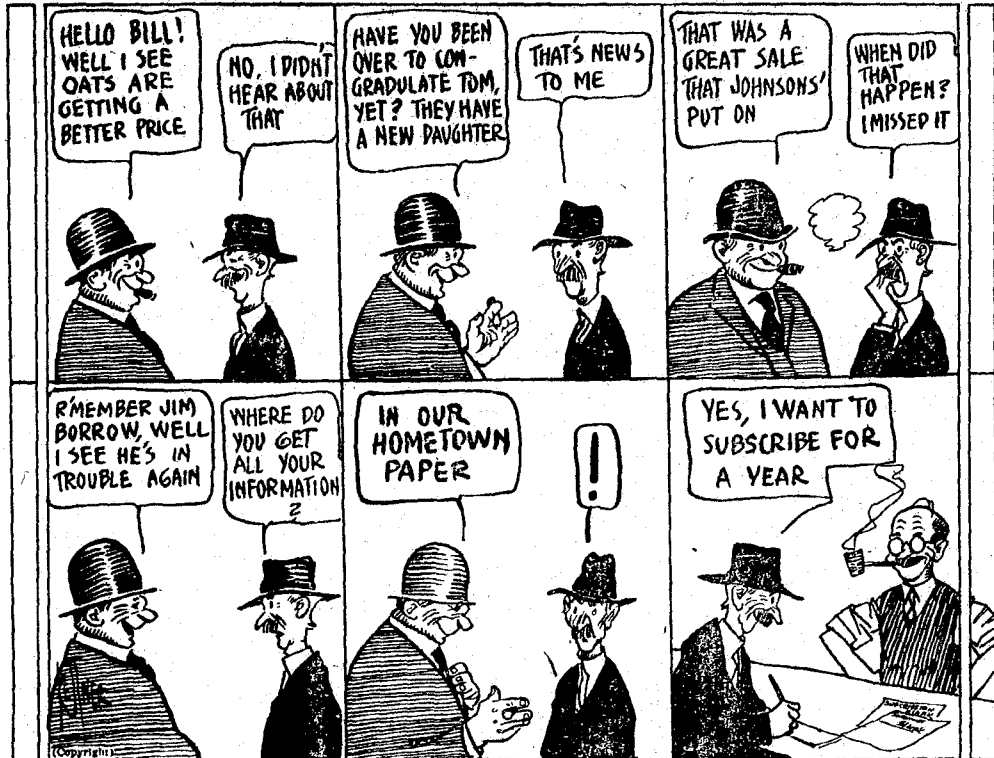

By an overwhelming vote of confidence, 439 to 43, given him Monday in the House of Commons, after a stirring defense of the government's program for settling the Irish dispute, the Premier not only received a clear mandate to deal with Ireland as he sees fit, but is permitted to undertake his Washington trip practically without fear of a political flareback during his absence.

FROM COMMERCIAL TRIBUNE.

HOME—WOMAN'S REALM.

Home is the habitat of woman. In the home all that is characteristically feminine in women unfolds and flourishes. Home without woman is a misnomer, for woman makes home and home is what she makes it. If she is illiterate, her home partakes of this quality; if she is immoral, her home cannot be the abode of virtue; if she is coarse, refinement does not dwell where she resides. If she is cultivated, pure, refined, those qualities will characterize the home which she creates. The higher the degree of her culture, her purity, her refinement, the more will these qualities characterize the home of which she is the center. The self that a woman takes with her in her marriage is her real dowry. If her dowry can be reckoned in numerals only, no matter how many they may be, wretched indeed will be her husband impoverished her children; but if she possesses industry, gentleness, self-abnegation, purity, intelligence, combined with capability, she is in herself a treasure of treasures.

Farm Bureau Notes

R. D. BAILEY
County Agricultural Agent

ANOTHER ONE.

Last Saturday afternoon your county agent delivered at the barn of F. A. Goshorn at Frederic, a splendid registered Holstein bull. This bull is the property of the New York Central lines, and is loaned to Mr. Goshorn. We predict an improvement in the stock of that community.

PROPER THING.

The Township board of Frederic township has enacted regulations against any bulls running at large in that township.

Maple Forest has done the same. How long will it be before all our townships will follow?

With scrub sires running the road we will never get anywhere but to poor stock and disappointment.

Needing the money as badly as we all do why do we persist in hanging on to low-class stock and permit scrubs to undermine all our efforts to advance?

HOW THEY STAND.

Even from men who would like to have an income from butter and cream your County Agent hears nearly every day: "Why do you push Holsteins? We want short horns (Dutch), because short horns sell better to the butcher."

We will explain plainly why we push Holsteins.

Follow the reasons carefully.

(1)—If you are going into the dairy business, you should not do it with a beef breed.

That would be like using a heavy horse from a lumber camp for a buggy horse.

(2)—You can't put two cows, a strong dairy animal and a strong beef animal under one skin.

Get on one side or the other of the fence.

(3)—As an animal develops strongly as a beef type, it fails in same proportion as a dairy type.

(4)—The few extra dollars the farmer receives the one time that he sends his beef cow to the butcher he loses each year on her as a dairy animal.

(5)—On consulting a list of the different breeds that have made one thousand pounds of butter fat a year by official test we find the following:

Holsteins	35
Guernseys	6
Jerseys	3
Ayrshires	none
Short horns	none
Brown Swiss	none

This list is in the County Agent's office; gives name of cow and pounds of butter fat, and may be consulted by anyone who calls to see it.

FOUND.

We believe we have found one of the most desirable suburban farm homes in Northern Michigan in the property of Adam Gierke, just out of Grayling.

Reached by a good road; within a short distance of town; equipped with high-class house and barn; provided with silo, sewerage, hot and cold water, electric light, pneumatic water pressure, garage, and purebred Holstein cows; fields running back to the Ausable river whose tree-fringed banks are a never-ending delight of color, and the haunt of song birds; a good soil steadily improving under the wise management of the owner; nestled in the midst of woods, where game may roam and multiply. We doubt if a more desirable farmstead can be found in this end of the state.

One of the best things connected with it is that the owner is open minded, progressive, and anxious to pick up new ideas and to improve.

with it is that the owner is open minded, progressive, and anxious to pick up new ideas and to improve.

LIME.

We wish that more farmers would try to realize the value of lime in their farming.

Lime is necessary to the growth of every crop.

Lime is constantly being removed by crops, and settles out of reach of crops thru rains and melting snows.

Fields that once had enough lime to produce good crops of clover and clover seed may now not contain enough near the surface.

Lime causes a light soil to leach less.

Lime causes a clay soil to be less sticky, and to puddle, run, and bake less.

Lime causes vegetable matter, that is plowed under, to decay faster and more completely.

Lime helps release fertilizing elements from the soil.

Lime causes beneficial bacteria to thrive in the soil, without which clover, alfalfa, and sweet clover will not thrive.

Lime is not found in sufficient quantity even in stable manure.

On nearly all land in this county it will be found necessary to apply lime.

With the soil tested owned by the Crawford County Farm Bureau the county agent is testing soil for all those farmers who wish.

Farmers are responding splendidly to this.

The county agent wishes to bring in ten cars of pulverized limestone this winter at lowest possible cost, and at no profit to himself of course.

One hundred thirty tons are already sold.

Applications of lime start a chain of good things; clover and alfalfa will grow; more cows are well fed; more butter and cream are sold; land is improved; income grows; satisfaction with farming increases; home comforts and conveniences are added; wife lives longer; children get more schooling; stay longer on farm which becomes the ideal place in which to live.

Abolition of Senate and House Advocated by Bay City Man.

Charles A. Brownell, Vice President of the Wildman Rubber Company of Bay City, Mich., told members of the Rotary Club that it was time for them to consider new ideas in regard to business and government.

Talking on the subject, "Something To Think About," Mr. Brownell first made a plea for the business men to consider the value of education. He asked that university and college trained men and women be given a start higher in business life and that boys and girls be educated in good government.

Mr. Brownell created a gasp of astonishment when he advocated that it would be better for the country if the Senate and the House of Representatives were done away with and a working organization of one representative from each state, with a salary of $25,000 a year or more, be instituted.

"Why not have but forty-eight Congressmen—one from each state?" asked Mr. Brownell. "Why not have the Supreme Court take the place of the Senate and pass upon laws that are created by the working body? Then it would be found whether they are legal and workable before they are placed on the statute books."

BIM ELOPES.

Synopsis.—Samson and Sarah Traylor, with their two children, Josiah and Betsy, travel by wagon from their home in Vermont, Vt., to the West, the land of plenty. Their destination is the Country of the Sangamon, in Illinois. At Nauvoo, they meet John McNeil, who also decides to go to the Sangamon country. Sarah's ministrations save the life of Harry Needles and he accompanies the Traylor family to New Salem, Illinois, and are welcomed by young Abe Lincoln. Jack Kelso and his pretty daughter Bim and others. Samson raises his cabin. Lincoln thrashes Armstrong. Harry strikes Dan McNeil. Harry is attacked by McNeil and his gang, and Bim drives off his assailants with a shot gun. McNeil is markedly attentive to Ann Rutledge. Lincoln is in love with Ann, but has never had enough courage to tell her so. Harry loves Bim. Traylor helps two slaves, who had run away from St. Louis. Elphail Biggs, owner of the slaves, has his arm broken by Traylor. Biggs makes a will making love to her. Ann announces that she is a candidate for the legislature. The Blues are in the town. Abe a captain and he and Harry go to the front.

CHAPTER IX.

In Which Bim Kelso Makes History, While Abe and Harry and Other Good Citizens of New Salem Are Making an Effort to That End in the Indian War.

In the midst of springtime there came cheering news from the old home in Vermont—a letter to Sarah from her brother, which contained the welcome promise that he was coming to visit them and expected to be in Beardstown about the fourth of May. Samson drove across country to meet the steamer. He came at the landing when the Star of the North arrived. He saw every passenger that came ashore, and Elphail Biggs, leading his big bay mare, was one of them, but the expected visitor did not arrive. There would be no other steamer bringing passengers from the East for a number of days.

Samson went to a store and bought a new dress and sundry bits of finery for Sarah. He returned to New Salem with a heavy heart. Sarah stood in the open door as he drove up. "Didn't come," he said mournfully. Without a word, Sarah followed him to the barn, with the tin lantern in her hand. He gave her a hug as he got down from the wagon. He was little given to like displays of emotion.

"Don't feel bad," he said. "I've given them up—I don't believe we shall ever see him again," said Sarah, as they were walking toward the door. "I think I know how the dead feel who are so soon forgotten." "You can't blame 'em," said Samson. "They've probably heard about the Indian scare and would expect to be massacred if they came."

Indeed the scare, now abating, had spread through the border settlements and kept the people awake at nights. Samson and other men, left in New Salem, had met to consider plans for a stockade.

"And then there's the fever an' ague," Samson added.

"Sometimes I feel sorry I told 'em about it because they'll think it worse than it is. But we've got to tell the truth if it kills us."

"Yes, we've got to tell the truth," Samson rejoined. "There'll be a railroad coming through here one of these days and then we can all get back and forth easy. If it comes it's going to make us rich. Abe says he expects it within three or four years."

Sarah had a hot supper ready for him. As he stood warming himself by the fire she put her arms around him and gave him a little hug.

"You poor tired man!" she said. "How patient and how good you are!"

There was a kind of apology for this moment of weakness in her look and manner. Her face seemed to say: "It's silly but I can't help it."

"I've been happy all the time, for I knew you were waiting for me," Samson remarked. "I feel rich every time I think of you and the children. Say, look here."

He untied the bundle and put the dress and finery in her lap.

"Well, I want to know," she exclaimed, as she held it up to the candlelight. "That must have cost a pretty penny."

"I don't care what it cost—it ain't half good enough—not half," said Samson.

As he sat down to his supper he said: "I saw that slave, Biggs, got off the boat with his big bay mare. There was a dark fellow following him with another horse."

tion, spent their great strength in the building and defense of the republic and grew prematurely old. Their work began and ended in darkness and often their days were doubled by the burdens of the night. So in the reckoning of their time each year was more than one.

Sarah went down to the village in the afternoon of the next day. When Samson came in from the fields to his supper she said:

"Mr. Biggs is stopping at the tavern. He brought a new silk dress and some beautiful linen for Mrs. Kelso. He tells her that Bim has made a new man of him. Claims he has quit drinking and gone to work. Bim and her mother are terribly excited. He wants them to move to St. Louis and live on his big plantation in a house new to his—rent free."

Samson knew that Biggs was the type of man who weds Virtue for her dowry.

"A man's judgment is needed there," said he. "It's a pity Jack is gone. Biggs will take that girl away with him sure as shooting if we don't look out."

"Oh, I don't believe he'd do that," said Sarah. "I hope he has turned over a new leaf and become a gentleman."

"We'll see," said Samson.

They saw and without much delay the background of his pretensions, for one day within the week he and Bim rode away and did not return. Soon a letter came from Bim to her mother, mailed at Beardstown. It told of their marriage in that place and said that they would be starting for St. Louis in a few hours on the Star of the North. She begged the forgiveness of her parents and declared that she was very happy.

"Too bad! Isn't it?" said Sarah when Mrs. Waddell, who had come out with her husband one evening to bring this news, had finished the story.

"Yes, it kind of spiles the place," said Samson. "I'm afraid for Jack Kelso—frail little fellow as he is. He don't break his heart. His wife is alone now. We must ask her to come and stay with us."

"The Allens have taken her in," said Mrs. Waddell.

"That's good," said Sarah. "I'll go down there tomorrow and offer to do anything we can."

When Mr. and Mrs. Waddell had gone Sarah said: "I can't help thinking of poor Harry. He was terribly in love with her."

"Well, he'll have to get over it—that's all," said Samson. "He's young and the wound will heal."

It was well for Harry that he was out of the way of all this, and entered upon adventures which absorbed his thought. As to what was passing with him we have conclusive evidence in two letters, one from Col. Zachary Taylor, in which he says:

"Harry Needles is also recommended for the most intrepid conduct as a scout and for securing information of great value. Compelled to abandon his wounded horse he swam a river under fire and under the observation of three of our officers, through whose help he got back to his command, bringing a bullet in his thigh."

With no knowledge of military service and a company of untrained men, Abe had no chance to win laurels in the campaign. His command did not get in touch with the enemy. He had his hands full maintaining a decent respect for discipline among the raw frontiersmen of his company.

When the dissatisfied volunteers were mustered out late in May, Kelso and McNeil, being sick with a stubborn fever, were declared unfit for service and sent back to New Salem as soon as they were able to ride. Abe and Harry joined Captain Bell's company of Independent Rangers and a month or so later Abe re-enlisted to serve with Captain Early, Harry being under a surgeon's care. The latter's wound was not serious and on July third he too joined Early's command.

This company was chiefly occupied in the moving of supplies and the burying of a few men who had been killed in small engagements with the enemy. It was a band of rough-looking fellows in the costume of the frontier farm and workshop—matted, dirty and unshorn. The company was disbanded July tenth at Whitewater, Wisconsin, where, that night, the horses of Harry and Abe were stolen. From that point they started on their long homeward tramp with a wounded sense of decency and justice. They felt that the Indians had been wronged, that the greed of land grabbers had brutally violated their rights. This feeling had been deepened by the massacre of the red women and children at Bad Axe.

A number of mounted men went with them and gave them a ride now and then. Some of the travelers had little to eat on the journey. Both Abe and Harry suffered from hunger and sore feet before they reached Peoria, where they bought a canoe and in the morning of a bright day started down the Illinois river.

They had a long day of comfort in their current with a good store of bread and butter and cold meat and pie. The prospect of being fifty miles nearer home before nightfall lightened their hearts and they laughed freely while Abe told of his adventures in the campaign. To him it was all a wild comedy with tragic scenes dragged into it and woefully out of place. Indeed he thought it no more like war than a pig sticking and that was the kind of thing he hated.

Harry had not heard from home since he left it. Abe had had a letter from Rutledge which gave him the news of Bim's elopement. The letter said:

"I was over to Beardstown the day Kelso and McNeil got off the steamer. I brought them home with me. Kelso was bigger than his trouble. Said that the ways of youth were a part of the great plan. Thors! Thors!" he said. "They are the teachers of wisdom and who am I that I should think myself or my daughter too good for the like, since it is written that Jesus Christ did not complain of them?"

"Have you heard from home?" Abe asked as they paddled on.

"Not a word," said Harry. "You're not expecting to meet Bim Kelso?"

"That's the best part of getting home for me," said Harry, turning with a smile.

"Let her drift for a minute," said Abe. "I've got a letter from James Rutledge that I want to read to you. There's a big lesson in it for both of us—something to remember as long as we live."

Abe read the letter. Harry sat motionless. Slowly his head lent forward until his chin touched his breast.

Abe said with a tender note in his voice as he folded the letter: "This man is well along in life. He hasn't youth to help him as you have. See how he takes it and she's the only child he has. There are millions of pretty girls in the world for you to choose from."

"I know it, but there's only one Bim Kelso in the world," Harry answered mournfully. "She was the one I loved."

"Yes, but you'll find another. It looks serious, but it isn't—you're young. Hold up your head and keep going. You'll be happy again soon."

"Maybe, but I don't see how," said the boy.

"There are lots of things you can't see from where you are at this present moment. There are a good many miles ahead of you, I reckon, and one thing is sure."

"What?"

"That's all," said Harry. "He's young and the wound will heal."

It was well for Harry that he was out of the way of all this, and entered upon adventures which absorbed his thought. As to what was passing with him we have conclusive evidence in two letters, one from Col. Zachary Taylor, in which he says:

"I know it, but there's only one Bim Kelso in the world," Harry answered mournfully. "She was the one I loved."

"Yes, but you'll find another. It looks serious, but it isn't—you're young. Hold up your head and keep going. You'll be happy again soon."

ible. Don't you hear it now? I never lie down in the darkness without thinking of home when I am away."

"And it's hard to change your home when you're wanted to it," said Harry. "Yes, it's a little like dying when you pull up the roots and move. It's been hard on you folks."

This remark brought them up to the greatest of mysteries. They tramped in silence for a moment. Abe broke in upon it with these words:

"I reckon there must be another home somewhere to go to after we have broke the last camp here, and a kind of a bird's compass to help us find it. I reckon we'll hear the call of it as we grow older."

He stopped and took off his hat and looked at the stars and added:

"If it isn't so I don't see why the long procession of life keeps harping on this subject of home. I think I see the point of the whole thing. It isn't the place or the furniture that makes it home, but the love and peace that's in it. By and by our home isn't here any more. It has moved. Our minds begin to beat about in the undiscovered countries looking for it. Somehow we got it located—each man for himself."

For another space they cried along without speaking.

"I tell you, Harry, whatever a large number of intelligent folks have agreed upon for some generations is so—if they have been allowed to do their own thinking," said Abe. "It's about the only wisdom there is."

He had sounded the keynote of the new Democracy.

So, under the lights of heaven, speaking in the silence of the night of impenetrable mysteries, they journeyed on toward the land of plenty.

"It's as still as a graveyard," Harry whispered when they had climbed the bluff by the mill race after midnight and were near the little village.

"They're all buried in sleep," said Abe. "We'll get Rutledge out of bed. He'll give us a shakedown somewhere."

His loud rap on the door of the tavern signalled more than a desire for rest in the weary travelers, for just then a cycle of their lives had ended.

GREAT PROBLEM OF SCIENCE

When It Is Solved It May Be Believed the God of War Will Be Detroned.

At present we know of but three possible sources of new energy—solar energy, the internal heat of the earth, and atomic disintegration, writes Floyd W. Parsons in the World's Work. The last-mentioned source of energy is just now attracting greatest attention. We know that the atoms of radium are in constant process of breaking up. We know that this disintegration liberates energy, for it has proved that the temperature of the air surrounding a piece of radium is about three degrees higher than the temperature beyond its vicinity. However, scientists have been unable to increase the flow of energy from radium by heating the metal to a temperature as high as that of the electric arc. Nor have investigators been able to slow down the disintegration of radium atoms by placing the metal in a temperature as low as that of liquid air. In other words, we are easily able to observe all of the phenomena of radio-activity and yet we cannot control this activity. That is the problem science is attempting to solve, and one day when the answer is written, the whole course of human life will be so changed through the utilization of the new knowledge that past revolutions will appear of small consequence in comparison.

When we have discovered the secret of the atom and can control its force, it is likely all nations will be ready and willing to lay down their arms and abolish their armies and navies. Statesmen will be glad to sit around a table and compromise their differences without any talk of force, for a power will be available in the world so mighty in its potentialities that no person would dare consider its use except for some constructive purpose.

"Frankenstein."

"Frankenstein" is a romance by Mrs. Shelley, wife of the distinguished poet, Percy Bysshe Shelley. The hero, Frankenstein, contrives to make and animate by his intimate control of the mysteries of nature, a monster in human form, who becomes the constant torment of its creator's existence. The monster was created without a soul, yet not without an intense craving for human sympathy, and he found existence on these terms such a terrible curse that in the end he slew his maker. The story of "Frankenstein" is said to be consciously or unconsciously an allegorical portrayal of the character of Shelley himself, who, in "Alastor," has painted himself as an idealist isolated from human sympathy. Helen Moore, in her life of Shelley, has a chapter on this subject.

NANCY'S STORY

"Yes, I know," said Daddy. "I promised Nancy I would tell her about the dolls I saw in the Old Natural History Museum in Washington the other day."

"I hope, Daddy," said Nick, "you found time to do a little business too, for you certainly found time to see things to tell us about."

"Yes," laughed Daddy, "I managed to squeeze in a little time for business too, but there were many things I knew I'd want to tell you about and so I saw all of them I could."

"There were many old and wonderful costumes and I could just picture to myself how Nancy would love dressing up in the very quaint and very old dresses and hats and shawls and capes."

"Figures wore these wonderful costumes and then there were some costumes which were just shown off without being on figures. They had dresses such as people would wear to balls and receptions or to business or for every day during the different years when the styles were different, just as the styles change now all the time."

"Of course, Nick, you and I aren't supposed to know so much about this. But Nancy does! For I heard her say the other day that she wanted to own some special kind of a tam because it was fashionable."

"Oh Daddy," said Nancy, "you shouldn't listen to such things!"

"Well," said Daddy, "I'm sure the new tam will be very becoming as I've also heard you're going to have it."

"But to return to the dresses and costumes I want to tell you about."

"Not only did they show dresses and costumes and suits such as were worn in the days of our grandmothers and great-grandmothers and great, great grandmothers and grandfathers, but they had dolls which belonged to the people long ago."

"Fancy that! There were dolls which belonged to the great-granddaughter of Major Bradford, who was an aide-de-camp to Washington."

"There were dolls and toys which belonged to children at different periods of time, years ago."

"Some of the dolls had blue eyes, and some had brown eyes. Many of them were real live and looked very fine and wonderful."

"There were some toys too, and there were some sets of dolls' china which didn't look unlike the china Nancy owns."

"There were many dolls and toys which belonged to children in 1870."

"So that any little girl who goes to Washington should go and see the dolls which used to be played with many years ago."

"But Nick, I have something to tell you too, this evening. There are boats of all kinds in this building too, and automobiles."

"Boats just like the very first boats of all are there, and every kind of a boat made since is there too."

"An automobile like the first automobile is in this building and ones which look like the different kinds of automobiles that there have been since."

"So any boy who goes to Washington would be much interested in the boats and in the automobiles and shouldn't miss going into the Old Museum."

"Nancy might like to see the lovely lace and the beautiful bags, the dresses, and the dolls but there is plenty for a boy to see there too."

"Some time we'll have to go and see them," said Nancy.

"I'll add to my list," said Nick. "And when I start traveling I'll never be able to stop for I have so much I want to see."

"So have most of us," said Daddy, "but in the meantime, the best thing to do is to hear of interesting places we can't see."

"And even though we may never travel much there are so many things about us to see too, and our friends tree birds and the animals about are always doing new and interesting tricks for us to watch and enjoy!"

DARLING BABY BRIGHTENS HOME

Children's Laughter a Pleasing Sound

Altoona, Pa.—"I am writing to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. We had six children die almost at birth. From one hour to nineteen days is all they have lived. Before my next one was born I took a dozen bottles of your Vegetable Compound, and I can say that it is the greatest medicine on earth, for this baby is now four months old, and a healthier baby you would not want. I am sending you a picture of her. Everybody says 'That is a very healthy looking baby.' You have my consent to show these few lines to anybody."—Mrs. C. W. BENS, 131 3rd Avenue, Altoona, Pa.

Mrs. Janssen's experience of interest to childless wives.

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are fond of children, and for a considerable time after we were married I feared I would not have any. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it strengthened me so I now have a nice, strong, healthy baby girl. I suffered very little at childbirth, and I give all the credit to your medicine, and shall always recommend it highly."—Mrs. H. B. JANSSEN, Millston, Wis.

Mrs. Held of Marinette, Wis., adds her testimonial for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She says:

Marinette, Wis.—"I was in a nervous condition and very irregular. My doctor advised an operation. My husband brought me one of your booklets and asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It overcame my weakness so that I now have a healthy baby girl after having been married nine years. I am glad to recommend your medicine, and you may use my letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. H. B. HELD, 830 Jefferson St., Marinette, Wis.

There are many, many such homes that were once childless, and are now blessed with healthy, happy children because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored the mother to a strong and healthy condition, as it acts as a natural restorative for ailments as indicated by backache, irregularities, displacements, weakness and nervousness.

Women everywhere should remember that most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones—they are not caused by serious displacements or growths, although the symptoms may be the same, and that is why so many apparently serious ailments readily yield to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it acts as a natural restorative. It can be taken with perfect safety and often prevents serious troubles.

Therefore if you know of any woman who is suffering and has been unable to secure relief and is regretfully looking forward to a childless old age, ask her to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it has brought health and happiness into so many homes once darkened by illness and despair.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

PARENTS-TEACHERS ASSOCIATION IS NEEDED.

In spite of the fact that there seems to be but little interest manifest in the Parent-Teachers association in Grayling we cannot help but believe that this is one of, if not the most important organizations of any city, and a very necessary one in any community. There are several hundreds of children in school for the purpose of education and culture and the training received there is of the highest merit and is fine as far as it goes. But there is more than that necessary in order to make more complete the knowledge that is fit them for future men and women.

The teachers desire to know the parents of the children and the parents should know the teachers. Many misunderstandings between pupils and teachers may be corrected by the coordination of these two factions. The teachers usually can tell the parents many things that they could know and likewise the teachers may learn many things from the parents.

And outside the school such association may do much good. The guiding hand to direct the young boys and girls in the selection of good reading, and the choice of their companions and of their amusements and habits is of the greatest importance and requires serious consideration. The teachers cannot do this alone, and the parents, by their association with the teachers may be of great help in deciding these important matters.

Out of the school the children are attracted to various forms of entertainment and recreation. Most of these are good but many are bad.

The parents should know where their boys and girls spend their time and know the companions with whom they associate. An association of parents and teachers will reveal much that will add in guiding the boys and girls into habits that are going to enrich their lives with bigger and grander characters, just such as all fathers and mothers hope for their children. The evolution of child training seems slow but it may well be taken as a fact that characteristics formed during the child age will remain. If they are good, they are blessings indeed. We know that Grayling can have one of the best Parents-Teachers associations that may be found anywhere. We already have the organization but it takes members and regular and faithful attendance and team work to bring it up to a standard of efficiency. It takes sacrifice of time and effort on the part of each faction, but that is little compared to the great good that may grow out of such an association, as the years pass. We do hope earnestly that more consideration may be given in interest and attendance of the meetings. The officers are willing to do their parts but they cannot work alone. The parents and teachers must back them up by regularly attending and taking part in the meetings, if they are to succeed in any large degree.

ADMITS WRECKING
PASSENGER TRAIN

HENRY GATES RESPONSIBLE FOR
LAPEER WRECK AND ALSO OTHERS, CLAIM.

MAN BELIEVED TO BE INSANE

Find No Motive for Crime, Other
Than a Desire to Watch
Train Pile Up.

Flint, Mich.—Two railroad wrecks and several attempts to derail trains in Michigan in the last few months are believed by railroad detectives and local officers to have been cleared up by the statement made at the Genesee County jail last night by Henry Gates, 59 years old, formerly of Huntington, Ind.

Gates admitted Monday, the officers say, that he tore up the rails on the Grand Trunk line between Lapeer and Elba last Saturday morning just before Grand Trunk train, No. 5, was due, and then jumped aside just in time to avoid being caught in the wreckage.

In a statement he made last night, the officers say, he also admitted that he tore up a piece of the track which caused the Michigan Central wreck near Dearborn last July, which resulted in the death of the engineer, and that he tried to derail a Grand Trunk train on the Saginaw-Durand division between Montrose and Brent Creek a few weeks ago.

Waited for Foggy Night.

The officers will ask doctors to examine Gates to determine his sanity. Detectives who questioned him said they could find no motive for his acts other than his desire to watch a train pile up, and they believe he is insane. Gates said that he stole the tools used to wreck the Grand Trunk train, Saturday morning, from a tool house near Elba several weeks ago, and that he has had them in hiding since then, waiting for a foggy night. Gates once worked for the Erie Railroad out of Huntington, he told the officers, and learned how to rip up tracks when he was a section hand.

According to the officers, Gates said Monday night that 10 years ago he was overcome by the heat and that his mind has been a blank at frequent intervals since then. He and his wife were parted eight years ago in Huntington, Gates said, and since then he has wandered about the country.

In Detroit Last Summer.

He came to Michigan only a few weeks before the Michigan Central wreck last summer, and his story indicates that he spent several days in Detroit, although he did not know the name of that city. After wrecking the train near Dearborn, he said he went to Howell, where he worked for a farmer for a few weeks. He said he had forgotten where he went after that but recalled going to Elba about a month ago.

A Timely Suggestion.

This is the season of the year when the prudent and careful housewife replenishes her supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is almost certain to be needed before the winter is over and results are much more prompt and satisfactory when it is kept at hand and given as soon as the first indication of a cold appears and before it has become settled in the system. There is no danger in giving it to children as it contains no opium nor other harmful drug.

SUGGEST READING.

You will hear it said that such a magazine prints suggestive stories, meaning that they present corrupting ideas in an attractive dress. But there is a suggestive also of quite a different sort—the suggestiveness that quickens the reader's sense of duty, stimulates ambition, gives courage to face adversity, fortifies against yielding easily to temptation. It is this better kind of suggestiveness that you will find on almost every page of the Youth's Companion. Which of these two kinds of suggestiveness would you wish to have exert an influence in your family life?

TRADE MARK
Farm Tractor

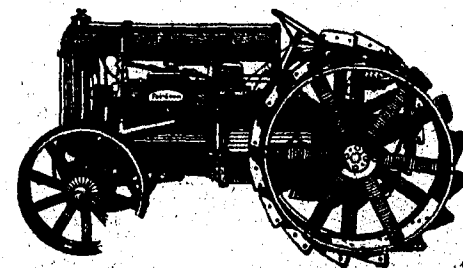

The Fordson cuts the cost of preparing land almost to half of what it cost with horses. But even more important is the fact that the Fordson saves from thirty to fifty percent of the farmer's time. And time saved—getting fields in shape to plant in the proper season; getting things done when they should be done—means money to the farmer. Besides it solves the labor problem.

As ever, the machine-way is proving more efficient, faster, easier than the old hand way. In the factory, the machine increases production, saves labor—produces more at less cost. And that is what the Fordson does on the farm. The Fordson way is the machine way of farming. Besides it solves the labor problem.

The Fordson's first cost is the lowest in the market; and the after or operating-cost is lowest. It is a compact easily handled tractor, backed by the greatest tractor service organization in the U. S.

We are Fordson dealers. Not only do we sell Fordson tractors, but we carry a stock of Fordson parts and employ Fordson mechanics to help the farmers get the best results from the Fordson.

Some of the merchants on Main street were pretty angry Wednesday morning when they came down to their places of business and found that their windows had been soaped for the second time this week. None of them seemed to find any fault with the Hallowe'eners who just for a little fun, soap the windows but when they continue the practice it ceases to be a joke. Parents and teachers can do much toward informing the boys and girls that such practices are unfair.

The Local Post American Legion is planning to fittingly celebrate Armistice day, Friday, November 11. Plans are not yet complete but it is expected that there will be a parade consisting of the band, ex-service men, school children and others. It is also expected that there will be a speaker from out of town, and in the evening there will be a grand ball in the Temple theatre. The public will be invited to participate in all the affairs. More particulars of the program and arrangements will be published next week.

The Sterling Male quartette, the first of the Lyceum course given under auspices of the Senior class, was given at the school auditorium Wednesday evening. They proved themselves to be clever entertainers, giving their audience some delightful vocal music, clever readings and funny stunts. It was a very enjoyable entertainment and was given to the Senior class. The attendance was very good, however the proceeds from the sale of season tickets falls far short of the amount guaranteed the Lyceum bureau.

The Ogemaw County Game and Fish Protection Association, with headquarters at West Branch, have engaged Harris and Chapin to represent them in a case brought by the St. Helen Shooting Club, a corporation, who recently served an injunction on Louis Payne, Henry Payne, Alva Valentine, Wm. The case is being watched with interest by a large number of sportsmen. Roscommon Herald-News.

One of the prettiest of the hallowe'en parties was that given by the Misses Mary Wilbur and Kathryn Brown at the home of the former on Monday evening. Witches and cats and other decorations suggestive of Hallowe'en were used to decorate the rooms. After the guests arrived a carver was in order which was won by Miss Ingeborg M. Hanson. Ghost stories were then related by each guest, or they were to make a forfeit. About eleven o'clock a lovely three course lunch was served, the table being graced by two sailboats fashioned of pumpkins, which were filled with delicious fruit. Maple leaves adorned the table and the napkins, place cards and favors found at each place were the Hallowe'en air. The hostesses gave each guest a cap which they wore the remainder of the evening.

As the fall days approach and Hallowe'en ghosts and goblins are in the air, everyone thinks of a party. It seems to be the party season. So Mark Lewis invited 20 of his friends to his home Saturday evening to help him keep the goblins away. The house was indeed spooky with sheets covering the chairs, pumpkin faces over the electric lights, and lighted pumpkins setting in conspicuous places. The makeups of the guests were very clever, everyone was a star. On arriving the youngsters were taken for an auto ride which was much enjoyed. After their return each child did some stunt. Then, the north wind blew open the door and in came a real witch and ghost. The witch lighted a fire and brew a story that made the very house creak with mystery. The lunch was a real Hallowe'en lunch in fact every feature of the party was just what one would expect at a clever Hallowe'en affair. At 9 o'clock the party broke up and all the little guests thank Mark for a happy time.

The first white frost of the season came Tuesday morning. It came late to do any great damage to crops, as they were already harvested and out of frost danger. It has been a beautiful fall. October weather was as fine as anyone could wish for. A few snow flurries this morning (Thursday) reminds us, however, that winter is at hand.

Everyone enjoyed themselves at the Hallowe'en dancing party given at the Temple theatre Saturday evening. The hall was artistically decorated with black and orange crepe paper ribbons, which were stretched over head, with streamers suspending therefrom. Hideous Jack-o'-lanterns covered the footlights at the stage, while the eyes of a huge owl glared upon at the jolly crowd. The windows were filled with black witchens, owls and cats. Clark's orchestra featured many moonlight fox-trots and waltzes and the silhouettes which stood in various corners of the ball room seemed to keep in rhythm with the dancers. The dancers refreshed themselves with orangeade and during a circle fox-trot the guests were given a comical cap and a toy horn, which added great merriment to the affair. The decorations were very attractive and by request were left in order for the dancing party that is to be given next Saturday evening. There was a fine crowd present.

Turn Onto the Road to Church

Church helps a man from his moral ruts and starts him on the highway of right thinking and right living. The longer we travel in ruts the deeper they become and the more difficult it is to get out of them.

The churches of this community are here to help you out of both social and moral ruts. They provide Christian fellowship and offer the only solution for sin: the gospel of Jesus Christ. No man ever regretted the time he spent in church attendance. Let us help you out of your ruts—perhaps you will help us out of ours. Come to church Sunday.

LEGION MAN IS LAWMAKER

Sturgis, South Dakota Legislator, Is Author of Measures in the Interests of Americanism.

The first man on the job in the morning, he further surprised legislative circles by never missing a single roll call during the time the legislature was in session. He was a chaplain in the army, he explained, in which well-known organization a man was either on the dot or ahead of it—or he wasn't!

Carroll D. Erskine, preacher-legislator of Sturgis, S. D., has carried what he learned in his country's service with him, the electorate of his state say. He left after 15 years of Presbyterian ministry on leave of absence to serve as chaplain of the Eighteenth Battalion during the World war, seeing 14 months' service. After the armistice, while stationed at Camp Merritt, N. J., he met all transients at the docks and ministered to wounded men being returned to American hospitals. In appreciation of his work the men presented him a jeweled watch.

In the legislature, Mr. Erskine was author of a bill to insure proper observance of Armistice day, and of another requiring all school teachers to take an oath of loyalty to the Constitution. He is a member of the American Legion in Sturgis, and state chairman of the boy scouts. He was born in Binghamton, N. Y., and educated at Lake Forest college, Illinois.

TO OBTAIN DENTAL SERVICE

Veterans, to Receive Treatment, Must Comply With the Conditions Prescribed.

An outline of the procedure for ex-service men to obtain dental treatment has been prepared by the national service division of the American Legion.

Dental treatment will be furnished by the bureau of war risk insurance to veterans of the World war under the following conditions:

1. Where a person has been awarded compensation for dental disability.

2. When such treatment is necessary for the cure of a condition which resulted from military service and is the reason for which compensation has been awarded.

3. In emergency cases which are immediately necessary for the relief of conditions endangering the life of the patient or causing great pain.

Claimants who have not been awarded dental disability, but feel they should have such due to military service, should immediately file claim in the regular manner; whereupon they will receive an order from the district medical supervisor to report to the nearest dental examiner for examination and such emergency treatment as may be required. Approval of the dental examiner's report must be made by the bureau of war risk insurance.

To receive the benefits of the dental laws, claimants must pursue their case through the regular channels, as bills contracted outside of the authority of the bureau of war risk insurance will not be paid, except where sufficient evidence is produced that the case was emergency or that the claimant was ignorant of his rights to dental treatment.

MOTHER SEEKS SOLDIER SON

American Legion Searching for James E. Adie, Shell-Schock Victim—Disappeared in February.

Refusing to believe that her son is dead, although she read recently a new paper account of the burial in Minnesota of a soldier who bore marks of identification identical with those of her son, Mrs. Margaret Adie, Lowell, Mass., has appealed to the American Legion for help in her untiring search.

The boy sought is James E. Adie, a wounded service man of the World war who disappeared on February 27 last while on his way from Lowell to Boston, Mass., where he was to receive a government examination. The former soldier was suffering from a severe attack of shell shock at the time.

With her husband's death since the war, the mother is in straitened circumstances. Her son's government compensation checks have been arriving monthly during his absence, she declares, but they cannot be cashed without his signature.

IRAK a New-Old State

The Water Front at Bagdad.

Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.

Irak, the new Arab state, of which Emir Faisal recently was proclaimed provisional king, under British mandate, strikes a new note to many ears; but despite its unfamiliar name it is a land whose influence upon the history of the human race it would be hard to overestimate.

For Irak is none other than Mesopotamia, that between-the-rivers strip of land which is believed by many to have been the original home of the human race—the Garden of Eden. There in the dim and misty ages before history began, men first attempted to form themselves into organized communities, there the Hebrew race found its origin, and thence their first leader, Abraham, went out in search of the land which he should afterward receive for an inheritance.

It is a long and comparatively narrow stretch of country, running up from the Persian Gulf toward the Taurus mountains and that lofty tableland which we now know as Armenia. On its northern and northeastern side it is bordered by a fringe of mountains, gradually sloping up toward the great northern ranges. On the southern and southwestern side it fades away into the great Arabian desert.

Its Two Famous Rivers.

Far up in the tableland of Armenia, about 800 miles in a straight line from the gulf, rise two great rivers—the Tigris and the Euphrates. The former breaks through the mountain wall of the tableland on its eastern flank and flows in a southeasterly direction throughout almost its entire course.

The latter breaks through on the western flank and flows at first westward, as though making for the Mediterranean. It then turns south and flows directly southward for awhile; then sweeps around in a great bend to the southeast and follows a course gradually converging upon that of its sister stream. Finally, near the sea, the two unite and issue as one river into the Persian Gulf.

The land traversed by these two rivers has, like the sister riverland of Egypt, been from time immemorial one of the great historic centers of human development. It divides into two portions of fairly equal length. For the first 400 miles the country gradually descends in a gentle slope from the mountains, forming an irregular triangle between the two rivers, within which the land becomes less and less hilly, as it sinks southward, till, as it nears the Euphrates, it becomes a broad steppe, which, beyond the river, rolls off into the desert. This portion is strictly the land called by the Greeks "Mesopotamia."

The second division is totally different in character. It is simply a great delta, like that of the Nile—a flat, alluvial plain, which has been entirely formed of the silt brought down from the mountains by the two great rivers.

The process of land making is still going on, and the waters of the Persian Gulf are being pushed back at the rate of about 72 feet per annum. What this slow process may achieve in many centuries is evidenced by the fact that we know that the ancient town of Eridu was, about 3000 B. C., an important seaport on the Persian Gulf. It is now 125 miles from the sea.

Control of Waters Necessary.

Both lands were entirely dependent for their habitability and fertility on the rivers which traversed them. In Mesopotamia the Tigris and the Euphrates have for long stretches channeled deep into the soil and flow below the level of the land. In the lower district—Babylonia—the ordinary level of the rivers is frequently above that of the surrounding plain; so that inundations are of frequent occurrence, and large tracts of the country are now unhealthy marshland.

In both cases, therefore, though for opposite reasons, the hand of man was needed to make the rivers helpful. In Mesopotamia the water was controlled by dikes and dams, which held it up until it was raised to the level of the land, over which it was then distributed by canals. In Babylonia the surplus water was drawn off directly by a great canal system, the banks of whose ancient arteries still stretch in formidable ridges across the plain.

Under the system of irrigation both lands were astonishingly fertile. Even today it can be seen that only well-directed work is needed to bring back the ancient fertility. After the spring rains, the Mesopotamian slopes are clothed with rich verdure and are gay with flowers. But of old, these lands were the wonder of the world for their richness.

Of Babylonia the Greek historian Herodotus, wrote 2,500 years ago: "This territory is of all that we know the best by far for producing grain; as to trees, it does not even attempt to bear them, either fig or vine or olive; but for producing grain it is so good that it returns as much as two hundred fold for the average, and when it bears at its best, it produces three hundred fold."

You had, then, a land which, in constant human occupation and with constant and organized attention to the details of irrigation, was capable of almost anything; but at the same time it was a land which, left to itself, went back quickly to wilderness. The parching heat of summer withered everything on the Mesopotamian uplands; the low levels of Babylonia very speedily became marsh if the waters were not regulated.

So, the hand of man being withdrawn or checked, both Mesopotamia and Babylonia went back to the state in which they were originally, and in which we see them now. They became great barren wastes.

There are few things more remarkable than the way in which this land which had once been supreme in the history of the world, and which for centuries was one of the great molding forces of human history, passed almost entirely out of the thought and memory of civilized man.

We know it, of course, from our Bible. The name of Nineveh, "that great city," and the story of Nebuchadnezzar's pride, as he looked round upon palace and temple and tower, and said: "Is not this great Babylon, which I have built?" These things are part of our earliest and unforgettable impressions of history.

Vanished From Memory.

The man who wrote the history and the prophecy of the Old Testament did so when these lands were living, and at the height of their glory.

Then came dark midnight. So utterly had the local habitation and the name of these great cities vanished from the memory of man that 400 years before Christ, when Xenophon and the Ten Thousand marched through the land after the battle of Cunaxa, they passed the ruins of Nineveh and never knew of them, and encamped beside the ruins of Kalah, another of the mighty cities of Assyria, and spoke of them as "an ancient city named Larissa."

The Young Turks, who came into power in the political upheaval of 1908, made an effort to reclaim the lost garden spot, but did not make any great headway. All activities stopped, of course, with the outbreak of the World war. But since the British occupied Bagdad in 1917, the work begun by the Young Turks has been pushed much farther. Many acres have been drained and dams and canals have been constructed. Bagdad has been connected by rail with Basra, the port near the Persian Gulf; and a line has been extended in the opposite direction from Bagdad, up the Tigris half-way to Mosul. It is planned under the new Arab state of Irak and the British mandate to continue the great engineering work that will be needed to rejuvenate Mesopotamia's ancient irrigation system. But there is much to be done before the "Garden of Eden" will bloom again.

Zeppelin's First Dirigible

Zeppelin's first dirigible was 440 feet long. This huge airship was not merely a bag filled with gas. It was constructed with a rigid framework of aluminum alloy, within which were 17 separate chambers, having partitions of sheet aluminum between. In each chamber was a gas bag. These had a total capacity of 400,000 cubic feet of gas, giving a lifting power of 82,000 pounds. The entire framework of the ship was inclosed in a covering made of cotton and rubber, which was really merely a jacket to protect it from the weather.

Crab Shells as Barometers.

The Araucanians of the southernmost province of Chile use a crab shell as a barometer. In dry, fair weather it is white, but when rain is approaching red spots appear on it, and when excessive moisture is present in the atmosphere it becomes red all over.—Indianapolis News.

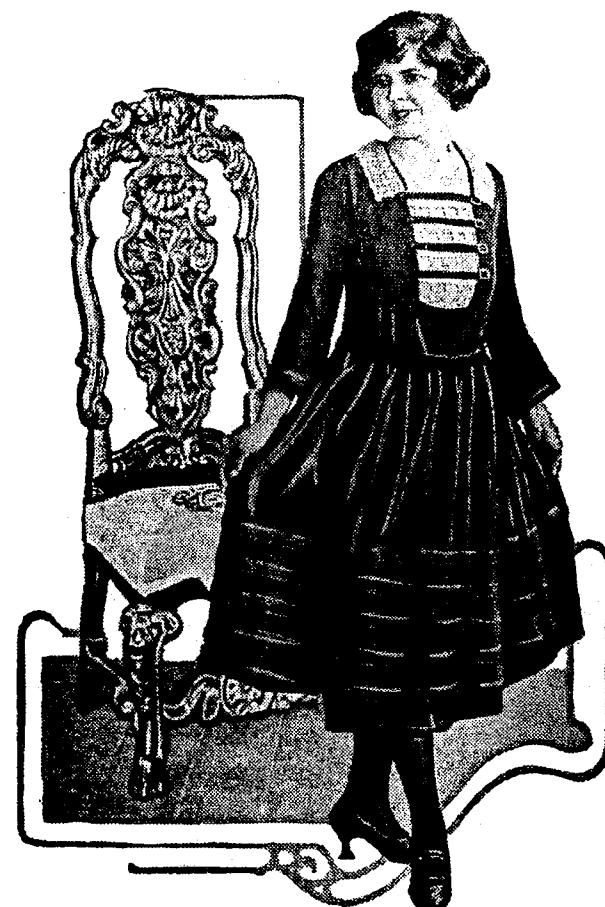

FOR GIRL IN HER TEENS; BLOUSES TAKE TO COLORS

THE girl in her teens looks well in anything, but frocks of taffeta seem to suit her best of all. There is a sort of demure gaiety about this pretty fabric that accounts for its sprightliness in dresses made of it, and perhaps that is why it is written into the history of every season's styles. The simple taffeta frock is a good investment when it is cleverly made—a very adaptable and versatile possession.

We must concede cleverness to the maker of the unpretentious, but alluring, dress for a young girl as pictured here. It has a plain straight underskirt as a foundation and above this a wide tunic with tucks bordering it, finished at the edge with narrow, picot-ed ribbon. The neck is cut out in a other silks, with georgette holding first place.

The long waistline is favored for blouses, as for frocks, and the peplum and tie-back styles are convenient modes for exploiting it, therefore the majority of models are one or the other of these. Two examples of the tie-back blouse are shown in the illustration, and they are representative styles. The blouse at the left, made of georgette in a dark color, extends its giraffe at the front into a deep scallop, suggesting a peplum. It is cut in the graceful, slip-over fashion, with kimono sleeves, and has an odd and pretty decoration of braids, in which small wooden beads and long bugle beads are effectively used with embroidered silk. deep square, revealing a vestee of lace. Straps of velvet ribbon, ending in little buckles at each side, make of this vestee a brilliant feature, and the neck is finished with a pretty lace collar.

A frock like this in black, or dark shades of color, is equal to doing service for many occasions more or less formal, according to the accessories worn with it; it is at home against many backgrounds.

Another fabric that seems suited to youth is plain crepe de chine, and frocks made of it have fine wearing qualities. It is a great favorite this season, especially in golden brown, which shade makes an effective background for colored embroideries and looks well with the fashionable high colors as flame, henna, orange and certain tones of blue. Used in factures or linings for girdles and floating panels, they give the liveliness re-loose sleeves are edged with a little border of the embroidery silk and wooden beads, and this decoration is repeated on the edge of the scallop at the front of the blouse.

A straight-line blouse of crepe de chine, shown at the right, has a square neck and straight sleeves that reach to the waist. Three wide tucks are introduced in the giraffe at the front, and are important. A very simple but novel decoration appears at each side in the old pattern done with embroidery silk. The sleeves have turn-back cuffs. This blouse would look well developed in satin or the heavier crepes, and is one of the best of the tailored models.

Costume blouses, which are extended into long panels at the front and back have, usually, loose-hanging metallic or composition girdles, making it easy to manage a low waistline for quired. Another pretty color combination for young girls is found in bright, strong blue, embroidered in gray.

A little journey among new blouses leaves two or three of their style features for this season well impressed upon the mind. The first thing to be noted is the prevalence of color and color combinations in them, and the trend toward dark shades. Colors are the same as those employed for frocks—as brown, beige, pleasant, blue and black or gray, with contrasting color in high tones to brighten them. Among these are henna, flame, orange, lighter blues, and rich red tones. It is evident that the white or flesh-colored blouse must give place to colored ones. Materials are georgette and other crepes, satin and them. These are also made to be worn as an entire dress, the panels extending to the bottom of the skirt, which can be either a petticoat of the same shade or a slip.

Don't Neglect Veils.

If you're doing a great deal of motoring your veils are bound to become very dusty and if the dust is left to rub on your skin when the veil is again worn, the latter will soon be greatly injured. After every long run, wash the veil.

Black Cord Sautiers.

Women who do not like the head necklaces are wearing the conservative sautiers. The newest ones are of black cord. Sometimes there are tiny pearl beads inserted in sections. One in a simple cord has the tasseled pendant, which is the latest thing in pendant effects, composed of pearls held together by a cap of silver.

Children's Dresses.

Bright wool fabrics, either in one color or in checks or plaids, are much used for children's dresses, with embroidery and braiding as the trimming. One chic frock recently seen was of red and white in about a half-inch check. It was trimmed with a scroll design in narrow red soutache braid.

Colored Shoulder Scarfs.

Marabou shoulder scarfs are made in colors now other than the seal, natural and black which are customarily used for this material. Henna, soft French blue and a yellow brown also appear.

Simple Explanation.
Mary and her cousin Susan were placed in a room by themselves to play with their dolls and picture books. For half an hour all went well, then there was a sound of lamentation. Mary's mother opened the door to learn what the trouble was and found Susan seated on the floor loudly proclaiming her grief to the ceiling while Mary, leaning on her elbows, chin resting on her hands, was gazing nonchalantly at the back yard.

"Now, what's the matter?" mother asked.

"Well," answered Mary, turning her face toward her mother, "both of us wanted to look out at the day, and both of us couldn't."

Response Was Pat.
The church buildings of Jeffersonville are nearly all close to each other in one precinct, known as the "church precinct." Two of the churches in this precinct occupy opposite corners at one street intersection. Services are held at the same hours, and the passerby can often hear two congregations singing simultaneously. The other day this is what happened:

From the open doors and windows of one church floated out the strains: "Will there be any stars in my crown?"

Like an echo there came from the other church to the grinning outsider, this response:

"No, not one; no, not one."—Indianapolis News.

"Frank! Your sister's name was Mary!"

"Yes, dear, but we called her Euphebia for short."

Up to Dad Now.
"Daughter," said Mr. Grabco, "has the young man who is calling on you at frequent intervals any prospects in life?"

"Yes, father," replied the beautiful girl with a strange new light in her eyes. "His prospects are just splendid."

"How do you make that out?"

"I said 'Yes' last night,"—Birmingham Age-Herald.

AN EDITOR WHO SEES INTO THE FUTURE.

The editor of the Alpena News has a real vision of what the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau has done and of what it could do if it were provided with sufficient funds to carry on a larger advertising and publicity campaign than has been possible with the money available. In a recent issue of his paper he publishes the following editorial:

Money Well Spent.
People who are alive to the best interests of Alpena county and Northeastern Michigan will be pleased at the action of the board of supervisors last week in appropriating another $500 to the work of the Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau. The amount being the same as last year.

To consider reducing the extent of our financial support of the Development Bureau would be folly. An increase would be desirable, but if we cannot make the sum larger it is right that we appropriate for this purpose at least as much as we have given in former years.

People living outside the district probably realize to a greater extent than we the benefits resulting to Northeastern Michigan from the activities of the bureau. When those benefits are noticeable, now, with the bureau supported in the penny-ante method of the past 12 years, since the bureau's foundation, it is impossible to estimate the returns on an advertising and development campaign such as Northeastern Michigan will put on when the time comes that it is fully awake to its own possibilities.

The Western Michigan Development Bureau, a year spends as much for advertising alone as we spent for the entire work of our Department Bureau. The Upper Peninsula annually spends thousands advertising "Cleveland"; we have all the upper peninsula can offer the prospective settler and more.

Northeastern Michigan is spending something like $10,000 or $12,000 a year for the work of its development Bureau. We ought to be spending four or five times that amount. When we come to realize what we spend in a real advertising and development campaign will be returned to us many times over we shall spend the large sum.

N. E. Michigan Brevities.

Saginaw county has apparently definitely abandoned the Northeastern Michigan development Bureau and decided that it will no longer give financial support to the work of developing a large territory which has always sent much of its trade to the wholesale and retail merchants of Saginaw. The supervisors for the 3rd year in succession have refused to make any appropriation for the bureau.

An interesting article entitled "Road Building in Northeastern Michigan," with views of half a dozen recently constructed roads appeared in a recent number of "Michigan Road and Forests," published in Detroit and the issue of the Detroit news of Sunday Oct. 16 carried in its Detroit section a number of views of state parks in this section of the state.

Agricultural exhibit in DE TROIT DEPOT.
Town and localities in Northeastern Michigan along the Michigan Central Railroad are missing one big bet in not making greater use of the agricultural exhibit in the passenger station of the New York Central at Detroit.

The Northeastern Michigan Development Bureau through the courtesy of the railroad officials, maintain an agricultural exhibit in the depot distributes Northeastern Michigan literature and receives the inquiries deposited at this exhibit by those who are interested in securing land or information about Northeastern Michigan, but the possibilities of this exhibit are not really used to one hundred per cent efficiency.

We should each week or at least semi-monthly be enabled to put in special exhibits from particular localities drawing attention to such products raised especially in these localities. An exhibit of fruit, one of potatoes, one of vegetables, and in fact everything of importance to the locality.

In the past the Bureau has put on special displays. Cheboygan county at one time had some beautiful apples and at another time we had simply a bushel of potatoes, but accompanying these a large full sheet placard stating that the grower, Mr. So and So, of such and such a locality, grew so many bushels to the acre; estimated the cost of growing them at so much, cost of land, and the fact that he sold them at such and such a price and showing a very fine net profit.

Now the Development Bureau is here in position at present to hire anybody to gather up these special displays, therefore we are suggesting to the local Business Men's Organizations, Chambers of Commerce, Farm Bureaus, etc., that in no way could they bring attention to their town more easily than by preparing and sending down these special exhibits with the information which should accompany them.

This has been a special year for corn in Northeastern Michigan and we should have a corn exhibit. It is estimated that about seven thousand people pass this location each day and we know from past experience that change in the display of exhibit always attracts additional attention.

When material is ready for shipment notify the Development Bureau Office (Bay City). Instructions for shipping will be sent and arrangements made to have some one at Detroit to receive and place the exhibit.

How Not to Take Cold.

Some persons are subject to frequent colds, while others seldom, if ever, have a cold. You will find that the latter take good care of themselves. They take a shower or cold sponge bath every day in a warm room, avoid overheated rooms, sleep with a window open or partly open, avoid excesses, over eating, becoming over heated and then chilled and getting the feet wet. Then, when they feel the first indication of a cold, they take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy without delay and it is soon over.

When a man has been away from his home town for several years he is first impressed by the fact that the place appears about the same as when he left, and next that his old friends, after greeting him like a long-lost brother, seem anxious to get away.

WAS ARRESTED FOR ALLEGED VIOLATION OF GAME LAWS.

Cade Attracts Much Interest. Jury Out But 17 Minutes.

From the Mio Telegram, Oct. 13:
"On Sept. 22nd, A. S. Snyder, who lives in Greenwood township, this county was arrested by Game Warden Penton Cral for having a small dam across a ditch leading from Big Bear Lake. Cral claiming that this ditch had been a running stream and the damming of it prevented the free passage of fish from the East Branch of Big Creek to the lake.

"The trial was set for Friday last, at Mio, and the jury was out but 17 minutes when they brought in a verdict of not guilty, which verdict was heartily applauded by the spectators."

The main point in the case seemed to be whether or not this was an artificial ditch or a natural stream, and apparently the jury had no trouble in believing that it had been built there by the owner of the land, and used to drain the low lands thru which it travelled.

In further comments on the case the Telegram says:

"This case was an outrage on the taxpayers of the county and has cost them the sum of $352.40, of which sum claims $48.85 as fees." Cral does not seem to be very popular with the people about Mio and it seems to be the impression of some that he is trying to make a record as game warden. He has been game warden since the first of August and boasts of 31 convictions. This is the first of his cases to be contested.

We consider that malicious and wholesale arrests on the part of any officer is a great mistake. An officer who is looking to find little things that may seem to be misdemeanors or in any way seem violation of the law, just so that he can add stars to his record of arrests, we believe is making a serious error. We believe also that when an officer fails to be in sympathy with the enforcement of the laws for the purpose of bettering social conditions, protecting property and people's rights, he is transgressing into a bully or perhaps a grasping, greedy fee grabber and he soon loses the confidence and esteem of the people generally.

Such officers soon have influence and their work lacks effect and conviction, and especially in jury trials cases he can seldom win a conviction. To be personal we may here cite an example of what we believe superior official efficiency. We recently asked Grayling's well-known game warden R. S. Babbitt, just what he would do in case he found a person hunting without a license, and that that person claimed he had one at home and had forgotten to bring it with him. Mr. Babbitt replied that he would expect the man to prove it to him that he was telling the truth and if it was found to be that way, he would be cautioned about letting it occur again.

A similar case to this was brought against a Grayling young man recently by Mr. Cral, and in spite of the fact that that person had not paid for a state hunting license, he was obliged to submit to the humiliation of arrest and also had to pay the court costs and we believe also a fine. There is no questioning the legal right of such arrest but we believe it was morally wrong, and tends to place such an official in a class where he will soon have difficulty in convicting his peers. Whenever Mr. Babbitt brings a case into court, the people have confidence that he is justified in making the arrest. He is greatly feared by wilful violators everywhere, because they know he means business; but he also is a man that he readily understands when drastic action is necessary in such good and sound advice.

We don't know Mr. Cral but we predict that his service in the game department will be brief if the reports coming to us of his wholesale arrests are true. A jury's confidence in an officer wins conviction or indifference of a jury toward an officer weighs largely in the minds of a jury when deciding the guilt or innocence of an accused person.

OLD CARPETS AND RUGS ARE WORTH REWEAVING.
Providing floor coverings for the home is often a question of making the best of what materials are at hand. One way of doing this, the U. S. Department of Agriculture points out, is to have new rugs woven from old woolen carpets and rugs too shabby to be used as such. Factories for doing the work may be found in many localities. The old material is cut into strips about three-fourths inch wide, which when sewed together and twisted make a cord somewhat like chenille and form the filling of the new rug. Cotton string is used for the warp. These rugs are heavy and soft, alike on both sides and durable provided they are cleaned carefully. They are generally rather neutral in color and without a definite design; borders however may be woven from strips of carpet of solid color, or figured carpet may be dyed for this purpose. In general, about 6½ pounds of old carpet is required to make a square yard of the re woven fabric, depending, of course, on the weight of the old material.

WRECKED SHIP'S CREW LOST

All Hope Abandoned of Locating 10 Men Sailing Rosabelle.

Benton Harbor, Mich.—With a strong northwest wind blowing over Lake Michigan all night and Tuesday morning, it is practically certain that the 10 men of the crew of two-masted schooner Rosabelle, which was sighted floating bottom up Sunday, have perished. Hope had been held out that the crew might reach the shore in safety in the small launch in which they are believed to have left the Rosabelle, but marine men said that a boat of that size could not have withstood the gale.

A Coast Guard cutter which set out from Milwaukee in search of the Rosabelle's crew has not returned and no message has been received from her.
